

U3O8.biz Launches to Cover Growing Uranium Market

Vancouver, BC, February 5, 2007 — The first independent, web-based news service focusing on the burgeoning uranium market was launched today at www.u3o8.biz.

“We are pleased to provide the industry’s leading source for independent analysis of the uranium market and the mining and exploration sectors,” says John Gomez, President of U3O8.biz. “Until now, information about the uranium market – particularly for investors – has not been readily accessible. U3O8.biz fills the void.”

U3O8.biz is poised to provide the most complete uranium news, analysis and information service in the industry, backed by market experts and comprehensive data.

Demand for accurate, unbiased uranium market information has increased exponentially with the spot price for uranium, now up over 200 percent since January 2005. Along with these unprecedented increases in the U3O8 price, the number of mining companies seeking new sources of supply has skyrocketed—now nearing 400.

Beginning today, investors, journalists and industry will have access to comprehensive information distributed by uranium mining companies, as well as industry news and research from around the world, to provide timely analysis on the ever-changing uranium market.

U3O8.biz also features a listing of among the world’s top public uranium mining and exploration companies based on their sector profile: production, production visibility, advanced exploration, junior exploration, or uranium funds. Selected companies include Cameco Corp. (TSX: CCO), SXR Uranium One Inc. (TSX: SXR), UEX Corp. (TSX: UEX), and Strateco Resources Inc. (TSX-V: RSC).

“Uranium is in a super bull cycle, fueled by supply shortfalls amid rising demand as the world increasingly turns to nuclear for clean, commercially-viable, long term energy solutions. I’m confident U3O8.biz will enable investors and industry to capitalize on today’s nuclear renaissance,” says Mr. Gomez.
